

Dear Colleague –

I wanted to let you know that Brookings is seeking a Fellow or Senior Fellow to join the Urban-Brookings Tax Policy Center in the Economic Studies Program. The scholar will conduct original, high-quality policy-relevant research in taxation and public economics, independently and in collaboration with other scholars inside and outside Brookings, participate actively in public policy debates, work with communications staff to effectively promote and disseminate their work, partner with development staff to build and steward funding for their work, and mentor junior staff.

A Ph.D. or equivalent in economics, public policy, law, or a related social science field is required. At least four years of relevant post-doctorate experience is required. The successful candidate will be an established, recognized leader in their field of expertise, will have a record of distinguished experience and/or leadership in government, academia, the non-profit sector, or the private sector, and must have the ability to understand and write knowledgeably about high-caliber public policy research.

Brookings welcomes and celebrates diversity in all its forms. We welcome applications that reflect a variety of backgrounds based on ideology, race, ethnicity, religion, gender, sexual orientation, gender identity or expression, disability, veteran status, first generation college goers, and other factors protected by law. Brookings is proud to be an equal-opportunity employer that is committed to promoting a diverse and inclusive workplace.

Applications will be read starting December 1 (but are welcome after that as well). The presumed start date for the position would be not later than summer 2023.
